Not illustrated. 1916 Excerpt: juniper, Port Or ford cedar, and California bigtree proved highly durable, the junipers and arborvitae particularly so. Investigations to determine the effect of resin in wood upon its durability made definite progress, and indications are that the results will conflict with prevailing opinions. Fungicidal Properties of Wood Preservatives. About 1900 tests on the toxic properties of wood preservatives were made during the year. The majority of substances tested were coal-tar and water-gas-tar distillates. Considerable variation was found to exist between different samples of the same substance, showing the need for standardization of the products. Studies of the ability of fungi gradually to increase their resistance to toxic agents yielded some interesting results. It was found that a 1 concentration of a certain wood preservative is sufficient to kill Fomcs annosus when the fungus is taken from a culture grown on a preservative-free media; but that when...
