When most people determine their worldview, it is done through a haphazard process of learning that never seems to point to any direct conclusions. We often end up with a patchwork of contradictory beliefs. We attain knowledge, but with no clear direction regarding the larger questions about God, Morality or ultimate purpose. What if it were possible to put together the knowledge of numerous and diverse disciplines in a systematic way? Would it point to a conclusion? In Let Us Reason Together, you will take a journey exploring the collective evidence of science, logic and historical analysis in an attempt to grasp these universal conclusions. How did the universe begin? How did life begin? Is there a God? Is the Bible reliable? What do experts say? Prepare yourself to encounter rational arguments, not empty assertions. Put your patchwork of beliefs away, and come, let us reason together!.
