Computer Help Company. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 221 pages. From the prologue: Gary stepped out of the parking garage into the bright New England sun. It felt warm on his face. Summer was pretty much over, but it wasn't quite Fall. He ambled along to the General Surgery building. He wasn't in a hurry, but he wasn't going to be late for his surgery either. He felt a little excited, a little giddy, and a little scared. He was going to be getting his Insert. He had been looking forward to it for years. This was a big deal. Gary's wife Jenny had gotten her Insert a year ago and the changes it had brought to her life, to THEIR lives, were significant and subtle. One subtle change was she no longer needed a phone. An Insert could do more than ANY phone. She would be sitting at dinner when she would suddenly raise a finger to Gary, indicating that someone was calling. Gary remembered the conversation she had had just last night with their daughter Elizabeth. Gary couldn't hear either side of the exchange but he could see the look on Jenny's face turn from hopeful, to neutral, to sad in only two minutes. She filled him in after the call. It was the same story, again. Oh, Elizabeth, thought Gary. My baby. What can we do to help you? He pushed these thoughts into the back of his mind. He was not going to let a problem he could not solve spoil the excitement of this day. And with an Insert he could spend more time doing research! There had to be something on the Net that might be helpful. That was a significant change about an Insert; a real improvement. Jenny had instant access to the World...
